U.K. to issue coin to honour Gandhiji

Context

- Britain is considering minting a coin to commemorate Mahatma Gandhi.
- Gandhiji's birthday, October 2, is observed as the International Day of Non-Violence.
- As part of a global reassessment of history, colonialism and protests against racism in the U.S., some British institutions have begun re-examining their past.
- Many organisations have taken initiatives to make investments to help the Black, Asian and minority ethnic (BAME) communities and to support racial diversity.
